Gartner Weblogs

Why can't we quote an analyst's weblog in our presentation, email campaign, white paper or on our homepage?

- Gartner analysts with blogs share their thought leadership on various IT topics; however, these posts reflect individual opinions and not necessarily Gartner’s published research position. In addition, Gartner weblog posts do not go through the same rigorous research processes or peer review as required for published research. For these reasons, we consider analyst weblogs to be personal points of view and viable for non-commercial use only.
